U.S. Senate Approves TPA; Conversations with ASEAN Insiders; Vietnam: World's Workshop

FEATURES

Senate ends TPA debate (62-38) on May 21; final vote before May 25

The 62-38 vote ended debate on the bill, moving it toward a final vote. The May 21 cloture vote signals that debate is over, amendments done, and a final vote is pending. The TPA bill is now more likely to pass the Senate, as early as Fri, May 22, or over the weekend. The procedural vote all but assures final Senate passage of TPA, for which only a simple majority is required. But supporters still must defeat a few amendments that administration officials say would draw a veto. The measure would then head for an uncertain fate in the House.

Senate approves TPA (62-37) on Fri, May 22

A coalition of 48 Senate Republicans and 14 Democrats voted for TPA late Friday, sending the legislation to a difficult fight in the House of Representatives, where it faces more entrenched opposition from Democrats. House Speaker John A. Boehner (R-Oio) has said that the TPA bill will come up in June, after his chamber returns from a ten-day break that began on Thursday, May 21.

U.S. House of Representatives to consider TPA in June

Speaker John A. .Boehner, R-Ohio, called the bill a "no-brainer" and said he would try and pass it in the House. "The House will take up this measure and Republicans will do our part, but ultimately success will require Democrats' putting politics aside and doing what's best for the country," Boehner said. "Let's seize this opportunity to open new doors for the things Americans make and the people who make them. An unlikely coalition of conservative "Tea Party" Republicans and liberal Democrats are opposed to both TPA and TPP, and the vote is likely to be closer in the House than in the Senate.

June 2 Understanding Whistle-blower Protection

In today's global marketplace, it is essential for multi-national companies to adopt strict reporting policies addressing corrupt conduct. #### Majority Leader confident that TPA will be approved by Senate

Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell confidently predicted that the Senate will pass the pending trade legislation this week. "I point out to my members who are somewhat squeamish, as you can imagine, giving the president the power on any issue, given his expansive view of his powers on so many other issues. But this is a trade promotion authority not just for President Obama, but for the next president as well. This is a six-year trade promotion authority bill that will give the next president an opportunity to enter into additional trade agreements with other countries around the world."

Senate Majority Leader McConnell sets TPA endgame

After a series of dueling objections, Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell moved Tuesday evening, May 19 to limit debate on the TPA bill. By moving to invoke cloture, Majority Leader McConnell has set a key vote on the package that combines Trade Promotion Authority (TPA) and Trade Adjustment Assistance (TAA) for Thursday morning, May 21, but what happens then is far from certain. Minority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., had cautioned against truncating the debate without considering lots of amendments, though the two parties were sparring throughout the afternoon about the process.

U.S. Senate agrees (65-33) to debate TPA, Thu, May 14, 2015

WASHINGTON, May 14 - A supermajority of U.S. senators voted Thursday to begin debate on trade promotion authority. The Senate voted 65-33 to begin debate. Thirteen Democrats voted with Republicans. Two GOP senators were absent. Republicans agreed to allow two separate votes on Thursday, most notably on legislation that includes language aimed at cracking down on China's currency manipulation. The bill passed 78-20.

After delay, U.S. Senate agrees to move forward on TPA, TAA, Wed, May 13, 2015

Senate leaders announced May 13 that they reached an agreement to consider and likely approve Trade Promotion Authority (TPA), a day after an unusual filibuster by Democrats of their party's presidential agenda. Roughly 50 Republicans and at least a dozen Democrats have declared their intention to support TPA, but Tuesday's failed vote came from Democrats looking for a way to win approval for the currency manipulation language. Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell (R-Ky.) and Minority Leader Harry M. Reid (D-Nev.) announced a plan that allows for a separate vote on May 14 for legislation targeting China's alleged currency manipulation. This legislation is likely to pass the Senate but its ultimate fate remains in doubt in the House, with a potential presidential veto awaiting it. Still, once that measure is taken care of, the Senate would move to considering Trade Promotion Authority. McConnell's announcement signaled that the tough currency legislation is not likely to make it into law, while the TPA will."

U.S. Senate Democrats vote to delay TPA - Tue, May 12, 2015

President Obama collided politically with his own party Tuesday when Senate Democrats stalled consideration of a trade measure that would give the administration greater authority to negotiate more freely with other countries. Administration officials and Republican leaders immediately said they would bring a measure back to the Senate floor. A procedural motion to open up debate of the fast-track legislation failed by a 52-to-45 vote, falling short of the 60 votes needed to begin consideration of the complex Pacific trade accord.

Fourteen U.S. Senators write USTR about TPP Labor Standards

In a letter to USTR Froman, Senators warned that waiting to implement standards after TPP goes into effect could diminish labor protections in TPP countries. "If we don't improve labor standards in TPP countries in a meaningful way, we fail to give American workers the ability to compete," said Sen. Sherrod Brown. "Before we sign a trade deal affecting 40% of the world's GDP, we must put stronger worker protections in place."

Why the U.S. textile industry supports the White House on trade

The U.S. trade representative says it won't turn back on yarn-forward. "I assure you there will be no surprises" in the TPP negotiations, U.S. Trade Representative Froman told NCTO executives in March. "We will work with you hand and glove." As part of negotiations over the 12-nation Trans-Pacific Partnership, the U.S. is insisting on a "yarn forward" rule of origin, that only fabric produced from yarn made by a TPP country would be eligible for duty-free trade.

What economic models tell us about TPP's effects

The TPP debate is reviving old misunderstandings about how trade agreements affect the U.S. and other economies. Over the past four years, colleagues and I have built models of the TPP that are now frequently mentioned in the debate. Since this work is likely to provide the most detailed assessment of the TPP until the United States International Trade Commission (USITC) issues its report some months from now, our results and their limitations need to be clear. Four broad insights emerge from our work:(1) The results do not suggest early, large effects from the TPP for the U.S. because our economy is so large, and 90% is minimally affected by trade; (2) TPP matters over time, by helping to move resources toward more productive firms and industries; some transitions will be difficult and costly, so we need adjustment assistance and other initiatives to facilitate worker mobility; (3) TPP will provide gains for our trade partners as

Improving the Investment and Business Climate: From Words to Action

National Assembly's Economic Committee, the Viet Nam Academy of Social Sciences, the Viet Nam Chamber of Commerce and Industry and the Central Institute for Economic Management met to discuss removing difficulties in production and business, restructuring the economy and improving competitiveness, particularly the impact of free-trade agreements and globalisation on the country's economy. They noted that FDI enterprises account for more than two thirds of Vietnam's total exports, while domestic enterprises are not connected to global supply chains.
