Sick Children At Home Are Leading Cause Of Poverty

When a child is sick in a poor family, a woman or girl spends their time taking care of the sick child and are not able to develop themselves. Sick children is one of the biggest causes of poverty.

Without money to cure their child, the child will continue to be sick or worse and requires constant care from the female caregivers.

If we treat the child so that she/he gets well, we enable and empower female caregivers to become more productive for themselves, their families and their communities.

As a result, mothers have more time to develop themselves. They can work to earn income or return to school.
